Tuition & Financial Aid

Now's the time to invest in yourself. Learn more about graduate tuition costs and the wide range of funding opportunities available to help make your goals a reality.

Getting started

U.S. citizens should first consider starting their Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA), the first step toward receiving financial support from the federal government.

Next, all students should visit our Student Financial Services (SFS) website for more details on current tuition costs, aid opportunities, and how to apply. Tuition and fees vary based on the program and may change yearly.

For additional questions, connect with an enrollment counselor who can help you evaluate the costs associated with your program of choice.

For information regarding tuition and fees for students studying at Canadian campuses, visit the Student Accounts Canada website.

See tuition and fees →

Learn how to apply for graduate aid →

Speak to an enrollment counselor →

FINANCIAL AID

Fund your future

A graduate education at Northeastern is an investment in your future; it shouldn't have to be a financial burden in the present.

We offer a wide range of opportunities to help fund your studies, including scholarships, grants, and fellowships. With more than $437 million in financial aid awarded to our students during the 2023–2024 academic year, we're committed to helping you find the financial aid solutions that can keep you on course toward your professional goals.

Scholarships

Our graduate scholarships are designed to help you pursue your goals without taking on debt. Discover untapped sources of financial aid through university-sponsored scholarships, college merit scholarships, and more.

Explore scholarships →

Military benefits

We offer substantial tuition assistance to active servicemembers and veterans, including unlimited institutional matching funds to eligible graduate students through the Yellow Ribbon Program.

See military benefits →

Fellowships

Fellowships offer graduate students the opportunity to apply their talents at research centers, universities, and nonprofit organizations worldwide.

Discover fellowship opportunities →

Assistantships

Assistantships are another great way to engage with your field of research as you learn. Certain assistantship opportunities will be arranged upon acceptance of your application; other program opportunities might be awarded at any time.

These opportunities include:

- Research assistantships (RA) are funded through externally arranged grants—RAs research with the support of regular faculty members.
- Teaching assistantships (TA) are ideal for students who wish to engage with the broader student body, including undergraduates. TAs help faculty members with coursework and instruction.
- Stipend graduate assistantships include a stipend, tuition remission, and health plans for eligible doctoral students.

Learn more about assistantships →

KNOWLEDGE HUB

Additional resources

Explore our articles for further guidance and helpful tips on funding your education.

Visit the Knowledge Hub →

Paying For Graduate School: 7 Funding Strategies

April 29, 2024

With a little time, research, and creativity, you can fund your dream of going to grad school. Find out how.

Applying to Grad School

Planning for Grad School

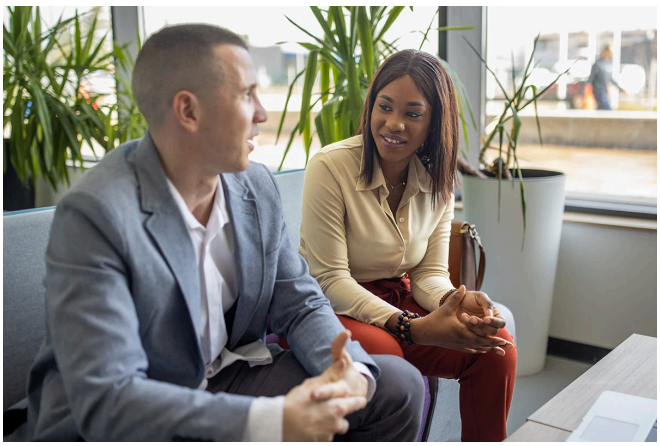

A Guide to Northeastern's Graduate School Scholarships

June 26, 2024

Learn how grad school scholarships, fellowships, and other forms of aid can help you pay for your advanced degree.

Applying to Grad School

Planning for Grad School

What Is Tuition Reimbursement? Taking Advantage of Benefits

July 15, 2024

Learn how to take advantage of this often overlooked employee perk to return to school and achieve your personal goals.

Career Advancement | Planning for Grad School